Foul Waters Recede

OUTFLOW: With levee damage repaired, pumps finally begin to drain water from New Orleans on Tuesday.

$40B More Eyed for Relief Effort

WASHINGTON | President Bush intends to seek as much as $40 billion to cover the next phase of relief and recovery operations from Hurricane Katrina, congressional officials said Tuesday as leading lawmakers and the White House pledged to investigate an initial federal response widely condemned as woefully inadequate.

One week after the hurricane inflicted devastation of biblical proportions on the Gulf Coast, Senate Democratic leader Harry Reid, D-Nev., said the total tab for the federal government may top $150 billion.

Republicans and Democrats alike heaped criticism on the Federal Emergency Management Administration, the government's front-line responder agency for national disasters. House Democratic leader Nancy Pelosi told Bush to his face at the White House that he should fire the agency's director, Michael Brown. "The president thanked me for my suggestion," she said. (AP)

Draining of New Orleans brings both hope and dread

NEW ORLEANS | Progress was measured in inches Tuesday, in the slow dropping of water levels outside New Orleans' buildings, as engineers struggled to drain this saucer of a city in a herculean task that could take weeks — if they are lucky.

The Army Corps of Engineers said the timetable ranges from three weeks to nearly three months, depending on a string of variables, including rainfall, the condition of the pumps abandoned to Hurricane Katrina, and whether the system can withstand the flotsam of broken buildings, trees, trash and corpses.

"We have to get the water out of the city or the nightmare will continue," said Louisiana Environmental Secretary Mike McDaniel. He said the water will be pumped into Lake Pontchartrain even though it is fouled with sewage, heavy metals, gasoline and other dangerous substances.

Following an aerial tour Tuesday, Mayor Ray Nagin said the water was dropping ever so slightly, and he estimated that it covered only 60 percent of the city.

"Even in areas where the water was as high as the rooftops, I started to see parts of the buildings," he said, adding, "I'm starting to see rays of light."

But he also warned of the horrors that could be revealed when the waters recede. "It's going to be awful and it's going to wake the nation up again," said Nagin, who a day earlier upped his estimate of the death toll in his city to as much as 10,000. (AP)

TECHNOLOGY

He's a Thief and a Lousy Photographer

Suffolk County, N.Y., police are considering theft charges against a man seen in images, taken with a stolen cell phone, that were automatically uploaded to the phone owner's Web account, Wired News reported. John Clennan said the phone was taken from his car last month, and, within days, he found almost 40 photos and five videos uploaded to his personal gallery. (EXPRESS)

TOY BIKES

Police Still Impressed With His Balance

A Honicknowle, England, man was arrested for drunk driving after operating a toy bike under the influence and without insurance. Simon Wotton said he didn't realize he could get in trouble for driving the Mini-Moto while drunk in the March incident, the Plymouth Evening Herald reported. However, the executive toys — which are 3 feet long, a foot and a half tall, and no faster than 30 mph — have been legally defined as motor vehicles, and any vehicle being driven on a public road requires insurance. Police said the bikes are not meant for roads anyway; Wotton has now lost his license. (EXPRESS)

BAKED GOODS

Fresh From the Oven

For artist Kittiwat Unarom, sculpture is his bread and butter. He has baked up this work of art, "Human Being Parts," out of bread at his Potharam, Thailand, studio. Kittiwat, whose family is in the bakery business, said he spent about six months creating his edible work. The theme? "Do not believe of what you see." The current plan is to have them on exhibit at the Institute of Thai Arts in Bangkok before the end of the year. (AP)

CREDENTIALS

Well, He Certainly Has Experience

The stigma of being an ex-con didn't prevent Joseph Ciccone from landing a good job — as a criminal justice professor at East Stroudsburg University in Pennsylvania. He's teaching three courses at the public university, despite being banned from public-sector jobs in a 2001 sentence for official misconduct. Ciccone, a former sheriff, promoted employees that raised campaign funds for him; shook down officials for contributions; and used public money for his campaign fund-raising. (AP)

Holdouts Refuse to Leave

New Orleans mayor warns of disease, risks of natural gas leaks

NEW ORLEANS | With the water dropping in New Orleans on Tuesday, military and police turned their attention to evacuating the streets of the estimated 10,000 people still believed to be in the city. Some have been holed up in their homes for more than a week and refuse to leave.

"You've got to protect your property, that's the main thing," said 69-year-old John Ebanks, who waved off would-be rescuers from a porch stocked with food, mosquito spray and other supplies. "This is all I've got. I'm pretty damn old to start over."

In a plea to holdouts who might be listening to portable radios in the powerless city, Mayor Ray Nagin warned that the fetid water could carry disease and that natural gas was leaking all over town.

"This is not a safe environment," Nagin said. "I understand the spirit that's basically, 'I don't want to abandon my city.' It's OK. Leave for a little while. Let us get you to a better place."

To that end, the Pentagon began sending 5,000 paratroopers from the Army's storied 82nd Airborne Division to use small boats, including inflatable Zodiac craft, to launch a new search-and-rescue effort in flooded sections of the city.

A NEARLY EMPTY CITY: Above, two soldiers stand guard in New Orleans on Tuesday as a house in the Garden District burns. Below, George Miller sits on Bourbon Street on Tuesday, despite pleas from the mayor to leave the city.

Some National Guardsmen and helicopters were diverted from their search missions Tuesday to fight fires, an emerging threat in a city that is still at least a day and a half away from restoring the first running water since the storm.

A candle was blamed for starting one major blaze in the lower Garden District — a historic neighborhood of mostly wooden homes.

"It all adds up to almost a solid sheen over the area right now."

The flames started in an abandoned brick building and spread to a neighboring apartment house. The blazes burned for hours before Chinook helicopters with water pouches were brought in to fight the blaze.

Eddie Compass, New Orleans' police superintendent, said lawlessness in the city "has subsided tremendously," and officers warned that those caught looting in an area where the governor has declared an emergency can get up to 15 years in prison. About 124 prisoners filled a downtown jail set up at the city's train and bus terminal.

"We continue to get better day by day," Compass said.

Recovering From The Hurricane

→ FEMA'S RESPONSE: According to internal documents, Federal Emergency Management Agency

Brown

head Michael Brown waited until roughly five hours after Hurricane Katrina made landfall on Monday to request Homeland Security Secretary

Michael Chertoff to dispatch personnel to the region, and then gave them two days to arrive in the area.

→ IN WASHINGTON: President Bush and congressional leaders pledged separate investigations into the federal response. Senate Democrats say the government's share of relief and recovery may top $150 billion. The $10.5 billion aid package approved last week by Congress was just "initial relief," House Majority Leader Tom DeLay, R-Texas, said Tuesday. Bush intends to send Vice President Cheney to the Gulf Coast on Thursday to determine whether the government is doing all that it can do.

→ IN HOUSTON: A plan to move some evacuees from the Astrodome to cruise ships docked in Galveston, Texas, has been postponed because many didn't want to go.

→ EVACUEE AID: Patrick Rhode, deputy director of the Federal Emergency Management Agency, said displaced persons would be receiving debit cards to buy necessary personal items. (AP)

Local officials seek to help survivors first, find funding second

WASHINGTON | Hurricane evacuees seeking food stamps in Texas started as a trickle and quickly turned into a torrent — eight applications the first day mushroomed to more than 26,000 within four days. To varying degrees, the same story is playing out around the country as state and local governments take in Gulf Coast evacuees by the thousands, taxing social programs that in many cases already were stretched thin.

Minnesota, already working to absorb a wave of roughly 5,000 Hmong refugees from Laos, is preparing for up to 3,000 Katrina victims while still feeling budget cuts in health assistance and job training that have taken effect since 2001.

In Oklahoma, Gov. Brad Henry spoke for many Tuesday when he talked of a desire to be helpful tempered by the concern that "we don't want to stretch ourselves too thin."

Volunteer Linda Ledford from Fletcher, Okla., sorts clothing on Tuesday at the Falls Creek Baptist Camp outside Davis, Okla., which is awaiting evacuees.

In many places, concerns about cost were taking a back seat to the impulse to help, at least for now.

San Francisco was moving ahead with plans to house at least 300 Katrina evacuees despite warnings that the city could lose out on federal money by responding too quickly to a Red Cross request for help. NANCY BENAC (AP)

Bush Warned on Lags In Disaster Response

WASHINGTON | The Bush administration was warned by congressional investigators in July that some first responders were concerned that their training and equipment was tilting too much toward combating terrorism rather than natural disasters.

It's too early to tell whether the shift affected the slow federal response to Hurricane Katrina. But it led some emergency personnel to raise red flags.

The emphasis changed once the Federal Emergency Management Agency lost its independence and joined the 22-agency Homeland Security Department in 2003.

Congress' Government Accountability Office reported in July that of 39 first responder departments surveyed, 31 disagreed that training and grant funds worked for all types of hazards. LARRY MARGASAK (AP)

Rumsfeld: Military Not Under Strain

WASHINGTON | The U.S. military's growing contribution to hurricane relief efforts in Louisiana and Mississippi will not diminish its capability to fight the wars in Afghanistan and Iraq, Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld said Tuesday.

"Let me be clear: We have the forces, the capability and the intention to fully prosecute the global war on terror while responding to this unprecedented humanitarian crisis here at home. We can and will do both," Rumsfeld told a Pentagon news conference. ROBERT BURNS (AP)

A Chief Justice Mourned

Colleagues, officials and the public pay respects to Rehnquist

WASHINGTON | Teary-eyed Supreme Court justices, a somber President Bush and one-time clerk John Roberts led a long line of Americans paying their last respects to William H. Rehnquist, the chief justice whose conservatism helped drive the high court toward the right.

Washington protocol underscored a changing of the guard Tuesday. Roberts, the former Rehnquist clerk named to succeed his old boss, was among the pallbearers carrying the flag-draped casket up the court's long steps and into the Great Hall.

Bush and first lady Laura Bush spent about a minute standing near the casket and a short time looking at a nearby portrait of Rehnquist.

On Wednesday, funeral services will be at 2 p.m. at St. Matthew's Cathedral in Washington, open to friends and family. Bush is to speak,

Roberts Hearings Will Begin Monday

WASHINGTON | The Senate will begin confirmation hearings next Monday for John Roberts to be the Supreme Court's chief justice, one week after President Bush selected him to replace the late William H. Rehnquist as the 17th leader of the nation's highest court.

Bush urged senators to confirm Roberts before the court session resumes Oct. 3 and said he was considering many candidates for filling a second vacancy. "The list is wide open," Bush said.

Senate Judiciary Chairman Arlen Specter, R-Pa., said senators on the panel would begin their opening statements Monday. Roberts would likely make his opening statement late that afternoon after being introduced by Indiana Sens. Richard Lugar and Evan Bayh, and Virginia Sen. John Warner.

Roberts may begin facing questions from senators starting on Tuesday. (AP)

Two Massachusetts residents have died from the Eastern equine encephalitis virus, a rare but serious disease spread by mosquitoes, public health officials said Tuesday. The patients were from Kingston and Halifax in the southeastern part of the state, said Donna Dust, dirt, pollen, animal dander and other airborne contaminants are pulled into your duct system every time the furnace or air conditioner runs.

These contaminants build up inside the ductwork over time and can help make your duct system a breeding ground for mold spores, bacteria, fungus, mildew and other microbes.

Each time the furnace or air conditioner is turned on, contaminants are spewed out and circulated throughout your home and affect the health and comfort of your family.

Family members who suffer from allergies, asthma or other respiratory ailments as well as children and the elderly are especially vulnerable to the effects of indoor air pollutants.

The removal of contaminants from the entire HVAC system is recognized by industry experts as the most effective way to eliminate air duct pollutants. This is referred to as the "source removal" method of duct cleaning.

In addition to the obvious health benefits, ducts cleaning can help you maintain a cleaner home. It also helps to restore HVAC system capacity and lessen running time, resulting in lower heating and cooling bills.

The HEPA-AIRE method used by our company assures you that your ducts are being cleaned with the most advanced source removal equipment available.

In a barrage of gunfire and explosions, Saudi special forces overran a seaside villa Tuesday where Islamic militants had been holed up, ending three days of heavy fighting that killed at least nine people. Security forces that swept into the building in the eastern city of Dammam found several charred bodies, apparently those of militants killed in explosions. It was the fiercest clash in months in the kingdom's two-year crackdown on al Qaeda-linked militants. (AP)

Egypt Poised for Landmark Election

Mubarak set to win first presidential poll open to competitors

CAIRO, EGYPT | The government warned on Tuesday that it would not tolerate election day protests, and the opposition fretted about possible ruling party dirty tricks in Egypt's first contested presidential vote.

President Hosni Mubarak, who has led Egypt for 24 years and is certain to win Wednesday's poll, calls the election a major step toward greater democracy in a country that has seen only authoritarian rule for more than a half century.

Giant posters have touted President Hosni Mubarak's candidacy in Cairo.

But many Egyptians are skeptical, and the opposition says the vote will do nothing to diminish Mubarak's power.

Hours before voting started, Prime Minister Ahmed Nazif took a tough line, warning that demonstrations were banned for election day.

The reformist group Kifaya had called for a rally Wednesday in one of Cairo's main squares to protest "corruption and oppression" and the continuation of Mubarak's rule.

"If there are demonstrations, they will be sabotaging the elections," Nazif told reporters.

George Ishaq, one of the founders of Kifaya, vowed that the group — whose name means "Enough" — would go ahead with the protest.

Until now, the 77-year-old Mubarak has been re-elected in referendums in which he was the only candidate and voters' only option was saying "yes" or "no" to his continuing in power.

Mubarak has touted his decision to allow election challengers as a major reform and has promised further democratic steps if re-elected to a fifth 6-year term.

The president faced nine competitors but only two were considered significant — Ayman Nour of the opposition al-Ghad party and Noaman Gomaa of the Wafd party.

U.S. Launches Airstrikes In Anti-Insurgent Sweep

Jets bomb areas near Iraq's Syrian border; troops hand over Najaf

BAGHDAD, IRAQ | U.S. jets struck targets Tuesday near the Syrian border where al Qaeda has expanded its presence, and civilians fled fighting in the northern city of Tal Afar, complaining they were running short of food and water.

To the south, U.S. troops handed the Iraqi army control of the Shiite city of Najaf that saw bitter fighting last year — a sign of the uneven pattern of insecurity in this fragmented country.

The U.S. command also said four more Americans had been killed in action.

The airstrikes occurred about six miles east of the border city of Qaim, major parts of which have fallen under control of al Qaeda-linked foreign fighters.

Elsewhere, thousands of civilians fled Tal Afar, a predominantly ethnic Turkomen city 260 miles northwest of Baghdad where U.S. and Iraqi soldiers are trying to wrest control from insurgents.

Some of those who fled sought refuge in the village of Taha, where local officials scrambled to provide for about 700 families. Some of the refugees disputed claims by Iraqi officials that foreign fighters had joined local insurgents in the fighting in Tal Afar. ROBERT H. REID (AP)

Talabani: Saddam Admits to Crimes

BAGHDAD, IRAQ | Iraq's president said Tuesday that Saddam Hussein had confessed to killings and other "crimes" committed during his regime.

President Jalal Talabani told Iraqi television that he had been informed by an investigating judge that "he was able to extract confessions from Saddam's mouth" about crimes "such as executions" which the ousted leader had personally ordered.

Talabani said that some of the confessions involved cases under investigation but he did not specify them. Saddam faces his first trial Oct. 19 for his alleged role in the massacre of Shiites in Dujail, a town north of Baghdad in 1982. (AP)

Evacuees Arrive at Armory

Nearly 300 survivors of Katrina airlifted to shelter in District

WASHINGTON | The first evacuees to reach the nation's capital — some wheeled in on stretchers — arrived to applause and filed past balloons welcoming them to the D.C. Armory, their new home for at least one month.

Two Delta Air Lines flights with a total of 295 people, including at least 12 children, arrived Tuesday at Washington Dulles International Airport Tuesday — a day later than expected. From there they boarded Metrobuses for the 27-mile trip to the armory, where haggard survivors shook hands with more than a dozen politicians and relief workers before going through Red Cross triage.

The armory is equipped with more than 400 cots.

"This is their home, such as it is," said Vincent Morris, spokesman for

Md. to Add Prosecutor To Target Local Gangs

U.S. attorney believes MS-13 poses great threat to area suburbs

BALTIMORE | The Maryland U.S. attorney's office plans to use federal funding to add a prosecutor devoted to gang-related prosecutions, a move that follows last month's broad indictment of MS-13 gang members in the Washington suburbs.

Rosenstein

The new prosecutor, which was approved by the Justice Department, will likely be based at the office's Greenbelt branch because of a surge in gang-related violence in that region, much of it attributed to the Hispanic gang MS-13, also known as the Mara Salvatruchas.

"MS-13 is a new and specific challenge in Montgomery and Prince George's," said U.S. Attorney Rod J. Rosenstein.

Nineteen alleged MS-13 gang members were indicted last month in Greenbelt on racketeering charges that include several murders and attempted murders in Montgomery and Prince George's counties. The crimes took place between April 2003 and June of this year.

Federal prosecutors in Maryland have used similar tactics against violent street gangs, including the Lexington Terrace gang in Baltimore.

MS-13, made up largely of immigrants from Central America, has an estimated 10,000 members in the United States. (AP)

Katrina's Costs Could Top $100B

WASHINGTON | The economic hit from Hurricane Katrina keeps growing, with experts now saying it's likely to top $100 billion and could go much higher.

And while the epicenter of the damage is on the Gulf Coast, consumers around the country — already dealing with record-high gas prices — also may end up paying more for everything from lumber to coffee because of disruptions wrought by the storm.

The government has yet to put an overall price tag on Katrina, but there is general agreement the hurricane will be the most expensive natural disaster in U.S. history.

Paul Getman, chief executive officer of Economy.com, estimates the economic loss from the hurricane that devastated New Orleans and a swath of communities along the Gulf Coast will total around $175 billion.

Most of that — $100 billion — is damage to homes, businesses, roads, bridges, levees, telecommunications, water and sewer systems and other public infrastructure, he said.

The storm's economic impact is being felt around the country because the Gulf Coast region is an essential hub for oil and gas production and distribution. The area also is home to vital shipping and transportation links that allow grain and other goods to flow out of the country and coffee and other cargo to flow in. JEANNINE AVERSA (AP)

NATIONALS

Rauch Offers Some Relief

The Washington Nationals reinstated right-hander Jon Rauch from the 60-day disabled list before Tuesday night's game against the Florida Marlins, and moved infielder Junior Spivey from the 15- to the 60-day DL. Rauch was 1-3 with a 4.00 ERA in eight relief appearances this season before being sidelined in May with a torn right labrum. He had shoulder surgery May 31. "Hopefully, I can fill in, eat up some innings and just help out," Rauch said. (AP)

BASEBALL

Pirates Fire McClendon

Lloyd McClendon was the first Pittsburgh Pirates manager brought back after four consecutive losing seasons. One loss away from a fifth such season, the Pirates decided they wanted someone else running the club. McClendon, an aggressive former player known for his competitiveness, was fired Tuesday after averaging more than 90 losses since 2001. Bench coach Pete Mackanin will be the interim manager for the rest of the season. (AP)

Lloyd McClendon never had a winning season managing in Pittsburgh.

COLLEGE HOOPS

Ginyard Breaks His Wrist

Roy Williams knew it would be hard for North Carolina to defend its national championship after losing its top seven scorers, so it's easy to see why he was worried Tuesday about an injury to one of his freshmen. Marcus Ginyard, a star at O'Connell High School, had surgery to repair a broken left wrist Tuesday morning. The 6-foot-5 swingman should be able to play when practice begins in October if his recovery goes as expected, team trainer Marc Davis said. (AP)

Back makes Terps' offense run in opening win

TERPS | It took four years of lifting weights, watching game film and practicing diligently before Mario Merrills earned the right to be the starting running back at Maryland.

Now that he's got the job, the fifth-year senior has no intention of sharing the load.

Merrills ran 30 times for 149 yards last Saturday in the Terrapins' season-opening 23-20 victory over Navy. Coach Ralph Friedgen never intended for Merrills to get that many carries, but he wasn't about to pull the plug on a guy averaging five yards per attempt.

The coach hasn't abandoned his quest to dip deep into the depth chart at tailback, but conceded that Merrills could make him change his mind. "If he keeps it up like he done, he will be the running back," Friedgen said.

Merrills had 96 career carries before Saturday, including only 33 last season. So getting 30 a game was a unique — and fully satisfying — experience.

"I don't think any running back would complain about getting the ball 30 times a game," Merrills, who scored on a 12-yard run with 9:15 remaining and ran in the conversion after the Terrapins' final TD. "We were running effectively, so they just kept giving me the ball."

COLLEGE SPORTS | Tulane athletic teams displaced from their New Orleans campus by Hurricane Katrina will be based this fall at five different universities.

Tulane's football team, which has been working out at SMU in Dallas, is moving later this week to Louisiana Tech in Ruston, about 230 miles north of New Orleans. The players will enroll in classes there that begin next week.

Federer Is Up to the Challenge

TENNIS | Roger Federer finally got a scare in the U.S. Open.

Looking more mortal than the guy who has dominated tennis the past two years, Federer dropped his first set in the Open before putting Nicolas Kiefer of Germany away 6-4, 6-7(3), 6-3, 6-4 on Tuesday to earn a spot in the quarterfinals.

"So far in this tournament, I haven't lost a set before," Federer said. "When it happens, you're not ready for it."

Lleyton Hewitt scored one for the fashion police in making the quarterfinals for the sixth straight year. He won 6-1, 6-4, 6-2 over No. 15 Dominik Hrbaty, who drew more attention for his pink peekaboo shirt than his play. The 2001 champion and runner-up last year now plays Jarkko Nieminen, who became the first Finnish man to reach the quarters in a Grand Slam event with a 6-2, 7-6(6), 6-3 victory over Spain's Fernando Verdasco. United Struggling to Keep Its Cool

When the going gets tough, D.C.'s players get red, yellow cards

UNITED | Trailing by one and struggling to find its rhythm in the Denver altitude last weekend, D.C. United lost its cool. Again.

Leading scorer Jaime Moreno punctuated his frustrating evening by kicking a Colorado player from behind after the whistle. He was ejected and will be suspended for Saturday's match in Dallas.

Upon exiting, Moreno passed his captain's armband to veteran midfielder Ben Olsen, who was cautioned a few minutes later for arguing with the referee and tossing the ball away. Olsen will be suspended as well for yellow-card accumulation.

A string of five consecutive victories that had D.C. United flying high just three weeks ago has been followed by a more troubling streak. In each of the past five matches a United player has earned a suspension.

D.C. has won once in that span. Four of those games featured an ejection, forcing D.C. to play with 10 men.

United players, led by Moreno and Dema Kovalenko (two each), have been tossed seven times this season.

The events are as distressing as the numbers. Bryan Namoff's red card on Aug. 20 was for dissent. Kovalenko's consecutive reds were unnecessary — one for an after-the-whistle altercation following a yellow and verbal warning and the other for an ill-timed tackle in midfield — and Moreno and Olsen's antics in Colorado were pointless.

Jaime Moreno picked up a red card on Saturday night and won't play this week.

When United stays disciplined, it has demonstrated that it can contend for a fifth championship, but lately the team has been beating itself.

Coach Peter Nowak will be forced to juggle his lineup yet again this weekend thanks to Olsen and Moreno's absence. Following the Colorado game he again demonstrated loyalty to his players and placed the blame squarely on the referees.

"The refereeing, right now, is getting out of hand," Nowak said. "Everyone is fighting for their lives, fighting for the playoffs, and we cannot lose games because someone had a different view of the game." BRIAN STRAUS

Coroner Pins Player's Death on Heart Disease

DENVER | San Francisco 49ers lineman Thomas Herrion died from heart disease when he collapsed after a preseason game in Denver on Aug. 20, the Denver County coroner said Tuesday.

Herrion had ischemic heart disease, with significant blockage in his right coronary artery that caused the death of heart muscle, the city health department said in a news release. Herrion's heart was slightly enlarged.

Drug screens on Herrion's blood and urine found only atrophine, a drug administered when medical personnel tried to revive him.

Herrion, 23, was pronounced dead early on Aug. 21. The 6-foot-3,

Johnson in Line to Get An Award

Mystics point guard is the favorite to grab Rookie of the Year

MYSTICS | Washington Mystics point guard Temeka Johnson is a leading candidate for WNBA Rookie of the Year honors. Johnson was among the league's rookie leaders this season in numerous statistical categories including points, assists and steals.

"She works hard," Mystics coach Richie Adubato said. "She'll just get better and better."

Despite being the league's shortest player at 5-foot-3, Johnson managed to put up some big numbers as she started all 34 games for the Mystics. The former LSU standout averaged 9.2 points and 5.2 assists per game. She also finished with a franchise-record 177 assists.

The WNBA will announce the league's top rookie soon. Adubato believes no player deserves the honor more than Johnson.

"I know the people competing against her and I think they're good players," said Adubato, "but I don't think that anybody deserves it more than her." BRANDY L. SIMMS

Door Open to a Lance Comeback

To spite the French, Armstrong considers ending his retirement

CYCLING | After winning his seventh Tour de France title, Lance Armstrong stepped off the winner's podium in Paris and into retirement, declaring, "I'm finished."

Six weeks later, he's already talking about a comeback.

Armstrong issued a statement Tuesday confirming that he's contemplating a return to competitive cycling in part because he knows it would rankle French media who believe his record of seven straight Tour wins is tainted by drug use.

"While I'm absolutely enjoying my time as a retired athlete with Sheryl and the kids, the recent smear campaign out of France has awoken my competitive side," Armstrong said. "I'm not willing to put a percentage on the chances, but I will no longer rule it out."

He first hinted of a comeback in an interview Monday with the Austin American-Statesman.

An Armstrong spokesman on Tuesday said it was a joke, but within hours, the cyclist confirmed it was possible. "I'm thinking it's the best way" to anger the French, he said. JIM VERTUNO (AP)

Chevy's retro HHR pays tribute to its stylistic ancestor

ROAD TEST | Chevrolet designers didn't want the 2006 HHR to look like a small station wagon or a crossover car/sport utility vehicle. They needed an eye-catching exterior to dress up the versatile cargo- and people-hauling interior of this new five-door model.

The solution: Retro styling reminiscent of the 1949 Chevy Suburban panel wagon that fits neatly over the HHR's front-wheel-drive platform — the same used in the Cobalt coupe and sedan. With a front MacPherson strut suspension and a rear torsion beam, the HHR moves with composure on twisty roads.

The HHR's power-assisted, variable-speed rack-and-pinion steering is electric. But unlike the systems found in other GM vehicles, the steering in the HHR doesn't feel artificial and there's a decent on-center feel.

Hurricane Hits SUVs

Katrina may impact carmaker lineups as much as gas prices

AUTO FUTURES | Hurricane Katrina battered the Gulf Coast, but it could also slam another, inland spot: Detroit.

For the auto industry, Katrina couldn't have come at a worse time. Well before the hurricane, creeping gas prices had caused consumers to cite fuel economy as a mounting concern. Detroit's greatest fear is that drivers will shift their car-buying habits, perhaps turning a cold shoulder to the SUVs and trucks that have accounted for the bulk of the industry's recent profits.

The problem for the auto industry is that it can't switch its product lineup on a dime. It takes almost three years to develop a new vehicle. And in recent years, auto makers have put most of their technological advances into horsepower instead of fuel economy. The upshot: The fuel economy of the average U.S. vehicle has remained flat.

Some auto makers say they're now trying to alter their mix of models and engines to emphasize fuel economy. Chrysler, for example, has begun offering pickup trucks with its V-8 Hemi engines that are capable of shutting off four cylinders to save gas while cruising on the highway. Chrysler's Jeep Liberty is now available with a diesel engine that gets about 30 percent better mileage than gas-powered models.

Despite all the hand-wringing, there's no immediate indication that consumers will curb their fuel habits. Indeed, as Americans grow increasingly dependent on their cars, demand for gas is rising — prices notwithstanding.

Who Will Save Bond?

The franchise rolls on as the search for the suave spy founders

CASTING | Will the next James Bond please stand up?

With production set to begin in January on "Casino Royale," the dashing movie hero might as well be missing in action.

The last Bond film, "Die Another Day," starring Pierce Brosnan, was released by MGM in 2002. But last year, Barbara Broccoli and Michael G. Wilson, who control the Bond franchise, told Brosnan, 52, that after four films they would not require his services for the new one.

The producers now face the challenge of casting a new Bond.

"Casino Royale" is scheduled to start production in January for an October release. But so far there's no Bond in sight. Broccoli and Wilson, her half-brother, often don't agree on the casting possibilities, according to talent agents. One source close to the movie reported that Broccoli liked "Layer Cake" star Daniel Craig, but Wilson didn't. Broccoli also thought Hugh Jackman, who played Wolverine in "X-Men" and has appeared in Broadway musicals, wasn't masculine enough. Colin Farrell was judged too much of a bad boy. Eric Bana wasn't good-looking enough. Ewan McGregor was too short.

Several bigger stars have passed on the opportunity to play Bond. When Clive Owen was approached by Campbell, he told Campbell that he wasn't interested in the role, his spokesman said. Owen will send up the character in the upcoming remake of "The Pink Panther."

And the search has dragged on. There have been rumors of a black Bond: British "Prime Suspect" star Colin Salmon. There has been talk of a Croatian Bond: "ER" star Goran Visnjic, who studied with a dialogue coach and did a screen test.

There are also concerns that the franchise has been skewing older as the boomer audience that grew up with Bond ages. In adapting Ian Fleming's first Bond tale, the 1953 novel "Casino Royale," they can reintroduce Bond as a 28-year-old.

But there is a risk, one former Bond marketer noted: Although the global franchise needs to be made more contemporary, "the danger of going too young to broaden the appeal is that you alienate the core, which is males over 25. He has to wear the suit well, as Brosnan did." ANNE THOMPSON AND BORYS KIT (THE HOLLYWOOD REPORTER)

Bob Denver Is Dead at 70

APPRECIATION | Bob Denver, whose portrayal of goofy first mate Gilligan on the 1960s television show "Gilligan's Island" made him an iconic figure to generations of TV viewers, has died. He was 70.

Denver died Friday at Wake Forest University Baptist Hospital in North Carolina of complications from treatment he was receiving for cancer, his agent, Mike Eisenstadt, said.

"He was my everything and I will love him forever," said his wife, Dreama Denver, in a statement.

Denver's signature role was Gilligan. But he was already known to TV audiences for another iconic character, that of Maynard G. Krebs, the bearded beatnik friend of Dwayne Hickman's Dobie in the "The Many Loves of Dobie Gillis," which aired from 1959 to 1963.

"Gilligan's Island" lasted on CBS from 1964 to 1967, and it was revived in later seasons with three high-rated TV movies. It was a Robinson Crusoe story about seven disparate travelers who are marooned on a deserted Pacific Island after their small boat was wrecked in a storm.

TV critics hooted at "Gilligan's Island" as gag-ridden corn. Audiences adored its far-out comedy. Writer-creator Sherwood Schwartz insisted that the show had social meaning along with the laughs: "I knew that by assembling seven different people and forcing them to live together, the show would have great philosophical implications." BOTH SIDES NOW: Jeffrey Blitz, director of the Oscar-nominated documentary "Spellbound," has clearly been carried away by geekish competition. Next, he turns his cameras on the cutthroat world of high-school debating, only this time, the film is fiction.

Let's Get 'Lost' in Swank DVD

ABC's mysterious show splashes out with a seven-disc set

DVD | The first-season DVD of "Lost" expands on all the suspense and mystery of the series with scads of extra features. For those who haven't joined the cult of Sawyer-and-Sayid worshipers, the seven-disc set provides an excellent introduction to the appealing survivors.

With panoramic views of the tropical island setting and convincing special effects, "Lost" has a more cinematic feel than most TV shows. Fans will want to revisit the episodes prior to the second season's premiere on Sept. 21 if only to comb each scene for clues to certain unanswered questions. But they also will relish the opportunity to dig into the extras, which are superb.

Disc seven is devoted to nothing but bonus features, including several behind-the-scenes featurettes, 13 cast audition tapes, a half-hour look at the making of the pilot, 13 deleted scenes, bloopers and an excerpt from a panel discussion at the Museum of Television & Radio. One complaint: None of the extras delves into the show's numerology, which has become the source of much fan fascination. Then again, that's what The "Lost" Numbers Blog is for (thelostnumbers.blogspot.com).

The "Lost" crew clearly put a lot of thought into what should be included in this collection. It shows, and it's why "Lost," unlike many TV shows, winds up with a

DOWN THE HATCH: Or not, as the disappointing first-season finale betrayed none of the "Lost" secrets. The fine DVD of that season, though, does the show justice.

DVD that matches the quality of the series itself.

➔ BEST AIRPLANE BONUS POINTS: The featurette "Designing a Disaster" shares fascinating details about doomed Oceanic Air Flight 815, re-created for the show with a retired Lockheed L1011 that had to be taken apart, flown to the set in Oahu and reassembled to create a crash site. If that aviation information doesn't fascinate, "Welcome to Oahu: The Making of the Pilot" goes a step further by revealing that pieces of the wreckage were used as instruments that can be heard, faintly, during the show's musical score. Now that's recycling.

➔ LOST 'LOST' BONUS POINT: There must be more Easter eggs buried in this massive set. But I've unearthed one: Click on the words "Disc 7" on the bonus features disc and you can see an alternate opening to the show. JEN CHANEY (WASHINGTONPOST.COM)

Luxury

Sweet suites await those who'll pay to heal in high style

Byron and Marsha Hooper agreed that the birth of their first child deserved a hospital room with all the extras: high-speed internet, two flat screen TVs and plenty of space.

"I've been real comfortable," said 38-year-old Byron Hooper as he surfed the Web, his newborn son sleeping nearby and his wife resting in her bed.

They considered the extra $250 a night for the 740-square-foot suite at Medical City Dallas Hospital worth it. "The main reason was so we could have our own TVs," said Marsha Hooper, glancing at the 20-inch flat screen above her bed. Her husband commandeered the 50-inch flat screen in the living room area for sports.

Medical City is among hospitals across the nation adding a little VIP treatment for those willing to pay extra.

Luxury suites are usually in major teaching hospitals, and hospitals located in areas with wealthy clientele. A boom in hospital construction has also inspired some institutions to add luxury suites as they rebuild.

Roosevelt Hospital in Manhattan offers amenities in 17 luxury rooms including marble bathrooms, unrestricted visiting hours and a refrigerator, spokeswoman Elizabeth Dowling said.

Roosevelt's accommodations range from a standard luxury room, at $350 a day over what insurance pays for a typical hospital room, to a deluxe suite for an extra $700 a day. The amenities are the same for the different suites, but the square footage ranges from 243 to 340 square feet.

David Masini, assistant vice president of administration for Roosevelt Hospital, said the key benefits are 24-hour visitation and accommodations for family members to sleep over.

"We do have a lot of people from out of town and it helps them avoid the inconvenience and expense of getting hotel rooms,"

YOU'RE WELCOME: Byron and Marsha Hooper sprang for a luxury suite in Medical City Hospital for the birth of their son.

Masini said.

Jewish Hospital in Louisville, Ky., added its 14 luxury rooms in 1999, said Barbara Mackovic, a hospital spokeswoman. For an additional $200 a day, perks of staying at the Trager Pavilion include valet parking, concierge services, Internet access and a fax machine in the 380-square-foot suite.

"I don't feel like we exclude anybody — for a lot of people, it's affordable," said Keith Inman, executive director of Jewish Hospital Foundation. JAMIE STENGLE (AP)

Women

Brain research holds secrets of female sexual pleasure

Drug companies make $2.5 billion a year selling Viagra, Cialis and Levitra to help men enjoy sex. Since more women suffer from sexual dysfunction than men, developing a drug that could double those sales would seem to be a no-brainer.

Yet there isn't a single sexual dysfunction drug on the market that can help women. Pfizer Inc. last year abandoned an eight-year Viagra study involving 3,000 women, conceding that its famous blue pill works only for men.

Viagra and its two competitors are rather blunt instruments — they work simply, by increasing blood flow down below. Women who take the drugs tend to experience the same physical effect, but this alone rarely satisfies them.

The latest research — being done by academics, rather than drug companies — suggests a neurological solution is needed. That's because when it comes to achieving orgasms, women are more affected by mood, self-esteem and other issues of the psyche than men.

While Pfizer and other pharmaceutical titans have abandoned the pursuit of a Viagra for females as too complicated, a growing number of university researchers are reporting progress with the help of brain scanners and other technology.

Brain scans measure the blood flow of research volunteers, whose heads are strapped tightly down inside the noisy machines. When brain cells start firing in a part of the brain that governs a particular emotion or activity, they need more oxygen, which is carried by the blood. The scans reveal something else about women — during orgasms, the pain centers in their brains shut down, and pleasure centers light up.

But a big problem with these scans is that no machine yet built is designed to simultaneously monitor both the brain and the body. And even if they could, the images' clarity would be muddled by "background noise" such as hand movements.

That's why Rutgers University researcher Barry Komisaruk is currently studying the brains of women who can self-stimulate purely through thought — a rare attribute that eliminates the noise — as he seeks to find out exactly what makes women tick during sex.

"The strange thing is that everyone knows that it all happens between the ears and not between the legs," said Gert Holstege, a leading sexual researcher at Groningen University in The Netherlands.

In June, Holstege published one of the first studies that mapped brain activity during orgasm for men and women, who were stimulated by their partners. Among other results, Holstege found that the part of the brain thought to control fear and anxiety — the amygdala — deactivated during orgasm for both women and men.

Brain scanning technology has been available for close to 20 years, but is only now being used to study sex. Researchers attribute the delay to several factors, including managerial skepticism and government reluctance to fund the work.

Sex research using brain scans is only just getting started, and scientists warn that any potential new drugs are years away.

↑ L'OREAL'S ILLUMINATION SHADOW in Dawn ($7) has an easy-to-use brush and a dispenser that keeps the powder in the bottle, not all over your hands. The sheer pink complements any skin tone.

↑ Lashes on runways this fall were big and clumpy. You may not be able to pull off the Tammy Faye look at work, but DIOR'S DIORSHOW MASCARA ($23) gives bigger lashes than anything we've seen. Buy it in classic black for instant glamour.

→ Model-perfect skin is in, but us mere mortals need a little help looking good naked. The key: light, sheer foundation like SURREAL SKIN BY URBAN DECAY ($24), a full-coverage base with yellow undertones to combat redness. The genie-inspired bottle can't be beat; the cap only lets out what you really need.

↓ For a deep shimmer, use MAC'S MINERALIZE SKINFINISH in three new colors: New Vegas, Metal Rock and Stereo Rose ($22). Put it lightly on lids for a professional look; add it everywhere when it's time to party. A dab'll do it for light-skinned girls, while those with darker skin can go deeper.

← Say goodbye to the high-gloss lips of last year; this year's are deeper in color and subtler in shine. LORAC'S LIP POLISH in Da Bomb ($18) is one of the most versatile hues out there—perfect for sharing with friends. The nail-polish-like bottle looks great in your purse, and the small brush makes application a breeze.

To look unmade-up

It's entirely possible to follow the same makeup regimen for decades on end. This fall's look is worth changing for, however: It's natural and adult, with flawless skin (helped along by forgiving foundation), a light shimmer, and surprising bursts of color. The carriers ($175) hold a mat, a towel and a bottle of water. ## Technology

Mouse Before They're Obsolete

The days of jacking our computers straight into our brains will be here any minute. For now, we must get by with crude pointing devices that make our fingers hurt and get mad when you spill things on them. Logitech's latest attempts to perfect the inherently imperfect mouse, announced today, are pretty hot, though. The V400 LASER CORDLESS ($50), above, is a laptop mouse with a slot to store its own USB receiver (the little dongle that lets the mouse talk to the computer)—just slip it into the mouse's base when not in use. The LX7 CORDLESS OPTICAL ($40) is ambidextrous, a swell innovation for those who switch mousing hands to prevent repetitive strain injury. HOLLY J. MORRIS (EXPRESS)

"I don't know how guys don't notice when they have really, really long eyebrows," said Sarshar. "It's like a comb-over for their eyes." Older generations tend to ignore bushy brows, but this generation knows better—as evidenced on the nightly news: "Younger broadcasters have perfect brows;

the old-school guys have a whole forest up there. It's scary." Do this simple test: If you can grab enough hair to pinch and hold with your fingertips, you need help. Ask your stylist to correct the problem during your next haircut; he or she will use shears or a trimmer to do a quick fix. "Eyebrow hair is still hair," said Sarshar. ## Coping With Katrina

I have found myself glued to the television during the coverage of Hurricane Katrina this past week, and I'm wondering how much is healthy. I've been feeling pretty sad and crying a lot when I see some of the footage and have been feeling so angry. I don't want to turn it off, because that makes me feel like I've hardened as a person. But I know I'm much more miserable than before. Do you have any advice on being a bystander to this nightmare? —SADDED WITNESS IN VIRGINIA

Finding the right balance during such a heartbreaking situation can be difficult. On one hand, it's good that you and others feel some sadness, frustration and anger — it keeps us compassionate members of a global community and spurs us to action. But people can become vicariously traumatized by overdoing the time they spend processing the graphic footage that's out there — especially people who might be highly susceptible (for instance, those with past traumas of their own).

Two feelings that are important to combat during this time are helplessness and isolation. Reaching out to help can keep you feeling more optimistic and in control. Volunteering or donating money can also help combat the sense of disconnect that might be making you feel worse, as can strengthening ties to your friends, family and community.

Finally, you must try your best to limit your exposure to this tragedy. It's not something to feel guilty about. There comes a point at which there is nothing further to be gained by making yourself another casualty of this awful situation.

If you're a gay male about to start college and move in with a roommate you've never met, do you come out immediately? Wait until it comes up? Keep it to yourself for a while? I'm fine with myself and plan on living my life openly, but if said roommate is going to be uncomfortable about it, I want to save myself some trouble.

—RARIN' TO GO

I'm guessing that wearing an "I'm Gay" sweatshirt when you meet him won't do you any good, whether he's tolerant or not. But if you want to maximize your chances of being yourself without being stuck with somebody unsupportive, best to at least allude to it during one of those first forced, uncomfortable "Let's be friends — hey, is this fried scrod?" roommate dinners. Even if he seems awkward about it initially, he may well be totally fine with it as time goes by. But at least you'll know you're not hiding anything, and if he starts spouting off any bigotry, you'll be able to get out of there before you've already let him borrow your iPod.

I WAS A RECENT VISITOR to D.C. A typical tourist, I was there to see the World War II Memorial. The only thing I left with was the memory of the hundreds of homeless people!

It is a sad state of affairs that our country has millions of poor, and the president does not need to travel more than two blocks to send relief to those in need. It is not just New Orleans! Poverty is everywhere in America. Close to the White House, it is out in the open.

MICHAEL JACKSON has written a song to help raise funds for the victims of Hurricane Katrina. The singer plans to ask other musicians to join him in recording the song, tentatively titled "From the Bottom of My Heart." Jackson hopes to record the song within two weeks in the style of "We Are the World," which he co-wrote and produced in 1985 to raise money for famine relief efforts in Africa. "It pains me to watch the human suffering taking place in the gulf region of my country," Jackson said. (AP)
